Designed for upper elementary and secondary classrooms

What can we do to engage our boys in reading and writing - without losing our girls? This session provides dozens of practical ideas for choosing books, organizing instruction and creating learning activities to meet the needs of all our students.

EXPLORE

- How brain differences between boys and girls affect their styles of learning
- How to choose books, stories and articles that will appeal to boy readers
- Sure fire topics and supportive techniques that will get all the boys writing
- Dozens of hands-on activities - from writing bingo, to using post-it notes, to reading non-fiction - that you can use in your classroom the very next day

Paul Kropp is an internationally known educator and author. His books for teachers include The Write Genre (with Lori Jamison) and The Reading Solution. His works for young people include nine award-winning young adult novels, many books for reluctant readers, and five illustrated books for younger children. His talks for teachers combine practical ideas with the wit and wisdom garnered from a thirty year career in teaching.
